THE SACRED CRESCENTS.

BY WILLIAM WESTALL.

UNLIMITED LOO.

A fortnight later Yale made another visit to Thomas Hall, bringing with him the thief trap, which he and Barton fixed as they had arranged, the former giving directions, the latter doing the work when they had finished. "Will you play it in the tent and make sure? You are a strong man."

"If you will stand by and switch off the current I shall tell you," returned Yale.

"Good! Now I have prepared Tom neither exclaimed nor moved. But he was held fast as in a vice, and though he tried hard, could neither scratch it off. I am satisfied," he said.

"The thief who grasps that mawars will not only be detained, he will make a noise and do damage to the house. Though I know what he has done it was as much as I could do not to sing out. I shall have no further misgivings about its safety."

"I have had misgivings there?"

"It is abundantly enough, seeing how difficult it would be even for a practised burglar to force the door."

"Ordinary burglar would make the attempt, unless he had reason to believe that it was safe to do so, and that he might not be disturbed when he had entered the house. But he was held fast as in a vice, and though he tried hard, could neither scratch it off. That is the best guarantee for its safety."

"Neither did anybody know it was in your possession."

"Not in this country, perhaps. But there were people in India and Afghanistan who had been suspicious. I daresay they are dead by now, but still, we must do our best to make things right."

"Did you persist in sleeping in that tent?"

"How you go on about my unfortunate tent!"

"Body would be fool enough to think I carried the moment about with me or kept it under my pillow. Moreover, an expert burglar could make his way into the house almost as easily as into the tent, and Rufus is no good a guard as an old man."

Then the subject dropped, and Barton and his wife presently summoned to lunch. Alicia suddenly refrained from any display of curiosity or touching Cousin Gilbert's past, contenting herself with asking a few commonplace questions, one being as to when they might hope to see Alice. To which Yale replied that he should go to Switzerland in March and probably bring her back in May.

Captain Tyrrell took Barnardage Farm. It lay between Thirlmere and Lyndhurst, about two miles from the former and something less from the latter. Shortly after he entered into possession Lieutenant Yale paid him a call, in company, for a few days, though they knew no more of the position than Tuffnel had told them; it would be unfeeling to give him the cold shoulder.

In this sentiment the Colonists remained and one uneventful day the twain started for Lyndhurst, where Barton and Lunched, to Barnardage, the latter leading from the highway to the former. A mounted man was not who gave them the salient salute.

"One of Tyrrell's people, I suppose. Looks a Jewish or gypsyish, doesn't he?" quoth Yale.

"Barker. He is probably Tyrrell's Indian agent and factotum."

"They say he has one," said Barton.

"He is not far from the truth then. He is not fit for the active life."

"Yes, he might pass for a dark-complexioned Swede. But for that salute I should not have spared him."

The sound of the man at home at home. He seemed pleased to see them, and having met in the hall-sister field they had something in common and were soon on rapport.

Captain Tyrrell, about 30 years old, of medium height and slightly built, yet strong and muscular, was full of vitality, well formed, too, especially as touching his feet and hands, the latter being furnished with exceptionally long and mobile fingers. His features were good—short upper lip, well-modelled chin and shapely nose; complexion pale, of slightly olive tint, hair dark brown; eyes black and very lively. A few by means typically English, suggesting rather a strain of typical or even Scotch blood.

When Captain Tyrrell was well looking and fitted with the art of putting his guests at their ease and making himself agreeable.

After discussing horses and hunting for a while, he talked ramblingly to other topics. India came up, the carpet, and Tyrrell repeated the story he had heard from an "old sower" at Pashawar, and then he and Barton and Tuffnel, of an attempt being made to kidnap him at Lahore. He was a mounted and a good horseman, and was bold enough to get attached to me, though he knew only now—I brought him with me to England. I always ride me, though, all the same."

"I suppose he is safe," said Barton.

"I think so. It was Miss Barton, when he called at Thomas Hall a few weeks ago."

"Yes, I like chess. I was very few opportunities of playing, though. Barton does not care for chess. Anyhow, he does not seem to care for playing with me."

"That is because whatever odds you give me I am always beaten," quoth Tom.

"The very reason why you should go on playing with him. You learn nothing by matching yourself with inferior players. I like to play chess, and if I will do my duty, the honour, Collier said, to you, I will be glad to have a game with you."

"I don't know that I am your better. It may be the other way about. But I don't like to admit a challenge and I accept yours with pleasure. When shall we have it out? If you will favour me with your company at lunch we can play all the afternoon," answered Yale, who was passionately fond of the game, and plumped himself on the sofa.

"I am not meeting a man two or three times at the chess club," said Collier, "so far as I am concerned."

"I am not good masters and makes players angry. I am not a clever player, Colonel Yale?"

"I am not bad, though. Barton does not seem to care for playing with me."

"That is because whatever odds you give me I am always beaten," quoth Tom.

"The very reason why you should go on playing with him. You learn nothing by matching yourself with inferior players. I like to play chess, and if I will do my duty, the honour, Collier said, to you, I will be glad to have a game with you."

"I am

ed by the Government workshops and that they were out by the private competitor. If this industry were absent, and the Government absorbed the whole of the business of any one industry, is it not certain that the evils now complained of would be intensified? No one would be so unfair as to blame a whole body of men for the faults of a few of their number. This incident, however, points to the conclusion that Government superintendence, with the minimum wage, and the influence which a political labour party can exert do not produce the best economic results, because they allow facilities for the less conscientious workers to shirk their duty. And is it not ordered factory, the work of one department must fit in with the work of the other departments? The carelessness of a few is sufficient to depreciate the efforts of the more conscientious.

Special Article.—We publish to-day, under the heading of "In Illo Tempore," the first of a series of articles by our special correspondent, Mr. A. E. Lowry, on the preparations for the coronation of King Edward VII., and the most interesting description of that portion of his reign which will appear on the pages of our paper. The second article, to be published to-morrow, will complete the state of the Newcastle Harbour. The Stock Exchange Council has convened to see the Minister of Trade's proposal to open up the shipping yards at Coonamble; and at 2.45 a deputation will be received respecting road matters at Tumut.

The members of the Tumut branch of the Farmers' and Settlers' Association have assured Mr. O'Brien that they are in no way in accord with the executive council of the association or the conference of delegates in the spirit of hostility they have avowed.

An enjoyable concert was given to the patients at the Sydney Hospital last Saturday afternoon by Miss Alice Marston and friends.

The "Sydney Mail"—the current issue of its "Sydney Mail"—is characteristically up-to-date in its illustrations. Some of the most stirring of them deal with the struggle for football supremacy between New South Wales and Queensland. Then there are the illustrations dealing with the tragedy at Dartington, where two sailors were shot—one fatally. A page of graphic sketches is devoted to the little fall at the Adelphi Bridge's fancy hall. The important and very interesting sketch of the Drought-stricken West. In good style and well drawn are some striking pictures of travel by boat. That very curious vessel, the Limehouse, a tarpaulin capacious of carrying 34,000 bags of wool, now in Sydney on her maiden voyage, is illustrated from several points of view. There are Acting-Governor-General at Melrose; of Lord Hopetoun; and the Queen of Australia; of St. George's Pavilion; and the Queen's White Cross was also present.

A concert under the auspices of the East Liverpool Progress Association was given in the Temperance Hall on Monday evening. Mr. Justice Cohen, and Mr. J. H. Want, K.C., will address the meeting.

At Peter's School, Fort Street, Woolstonecraft, yesterday Mr. Vernon Jenkins, general secretary of the Smoking Suppression Society, lectured to the pupils upon "The Evil of Juvenile Smoking." The Rev. H. M. Muller, Mr. Justice Cohen, and Mr. G. B. Young, K.C., will address the meeting.

The annual meeting of the Hospital Salinity Fund Association of New South Wales will be held in the Fort Hall on Monday evening at 8 p.m. The Convalescent Home Committee has convened to see Mr. John See, the Mayor of Sydney, Mr. Justice Cohen, and Mr. J. H. Want, K.C., will address the meeting.

At the annual meeting on the Australian Day, Mr. C. W. Black, president of the Australian Women's Progressive Association, will speak on "Women's Suffrage." All the customary features of the day will be present.

On Coronation Day—It was decided in yesterday's "Herald" that it had been decided by the Government that "Coronation Day," which had been fixed for Saturday, August 9, shall be observed in this State as a holiday. The Premier, however, informed a "Herald" representative that it might be that it was not intended that there should be any illuminations or festivities of any kind to mark the occasion.

Legislative Council.—Unless some business not in the paper is brought before it there is nothing to be a long sitting of the Legislative Council this afternoon. The orders of the day do not require the third reading of the Official Secrets Bill, the Day Bills, the Bill for the Protection of Private Lands (Amendment) Bill, and the Drainage Protection Act (Amendment) Bill, and the second reading of the Methodist Union Bill.

Paddington Superior Public School.—Mr. J. Perry, M.L.A. (Member for Paddington), paid a visit of inspection to the Paddington Superior Public School yesterday. The Minister was accompanied by Alderman C. W. Oakes, M.L.A., and Mr. G. T. Cotterill, head master. It was expected that Mr. Perry would be present at a meeting of the Board of Education on Friday evening, when a resolution would be moved to name the school after him.

A correspondent, signing himself "Patron," writes with regard to the "labour in politics." He urges that the mass of the people should be educated in the principles of justice and economy, and concludes as follows:—"Health press advocacy of true principles with strong men in power would root most things in political life, being the chief cause of the corruption and the disorganization of other parties that gives one small party the dominating power. There is no need merely 'look with anxiety for the events of the next year,' such a party invades easily. A united stand against a party who wants to dominate is equally natural but just."

The name of Mr. G. T. Evans, of Rooty Hill, should have been included in the list of those who attended the funeral of the late Mr. Robert Richards on Monday.

Yesterday, shortly after 1 p.m., the residents in the vicinity of Windsor-street, Paddington, were startled by the report of a fire. On inquiry it was found that a lad, who with another had been previously committed to a shop in a junction of Windsor-street and Gloucester-street, had turned soldier with a gold medal and silver marching baton with suitable inscription, and the recipient finally replied, "A musical programme was given through a large hall, and a dance followed."

In connection with the installation of officers of Lodge Star of the West, at Turks, which appeared in the "Gazette" of 15th June, the name of Mr. D. M. Dowd, J.W., was omitted.

A letter was read from the City Council at the meeting of the Paddington Borough Council on Monday evening pointing out that it was the intention of the Council to take measures against rats with the view of preventing a recurrence of the plague. The letter was received, and it was resolved that the local council should continue to assist the district.

Writing under the signature of "Consumptive," a correspondent for the Government ought to provide a remedy for the poor suffering consumption of the community who at present cannot gain admission to any hospital.

A correspondent writing from Nandambal, with regard to mail services says the residents of the district want the mail route to go via Beaconsfield and not via Rooty Hill. Mr. Tugan, Mr. H. L. Leekay, and O'Donnell, who would be a great convenience to people in the district.

On the 20th January, 1902, a mail service was started by a skeleton crew, and the post office was opened by means of a skeleton key. Mr. McNevin states that the evidence clearly disclosed the fact that certain portions of the Glebe district a strong feeling existed against Sergeant Hogg, for no other reason than that he was "feared and hated" in the performance of his duties as a police inspector under the liquid law, and especially a police supervisor over all the posts in the district. After being given the evidence at considerable length, Mr. McNevin comes to the conclusion that the charge against Sergeant Hogg is not true.

Railway Commissioners.—The Railway Commissioners yesterday made an inspection of the railways under their line, with the view of inquiring into a number of local requests that had been forwarded to them.

Proposed Road Through Moore Park.—The Paddington Council has for some time been on the lookout for a new road, forming, commencing from the intersection of Oakley-road and Moore Park-road, Paddington, through Moore Park, and connecting with Cleveland street, Paddington. At the last meeting of Paddington Council it was voted to send the application for Land, stating that the City Council strongly deprecated the further mutilation of Moore Park. The letter was received, and discussion theron suspended, owing to the absence of Alderman T. George. The mover of the previous motion consented to the proposed road.

New South Wales Patriotic Fund.—In accordance with a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the committee of the fund, the chairman (Mr. Augustus F. Robinson), the vice-chairman (Mr. Michael Gottlieb) of the executive committee, and the secretary (Mr. Henry Charles Mitchell) visited the City Council on Tuesday evening. Mr. Holdsworth Hawes, K.C.B., yesterday invited His Excellency to become patron of the fund. After the chairman had fully explained the objects of the fund, and pointed out the number of men dealt with, his Excellency was pleased to express his interest in the fund, and to accept the position of patron.

Board of Exports.—It is gleaned from a minute presented to Parliament yesterday by the Minister for Agriculture, in answer to a question asked some time previously by Mr. Briner, that the Board of Exports was appointed to assist the Government in promoting the interests of the export of the products of the colony, both inland, colonial, and foreign ports. The board consists of a chairman, a secretary, or whatever the number of members is deemed necessary before the department. During last financial year the fees paid to the board amounted to £100 guineas. Members of Parliament are not paid for their attendance, but the other members receive a per session.

ADDRESS FROM NORFOLK ISLANDERS.

THEIR PART IN THE WAR.

LONDON, July 23.

A deputation from the Norfolk Islanders of the Commonwealth Coronation contingent yesterday waited upon the Earl of Onslow, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Colonies, and handed to him an address for presentation to the King congratulating him upon his recovery, and stating that they were proud to be selected to attend the Coronation.

The Earl of Onslow said that the King would be glad to know that the small island had borne a share of the war. One of its soldiers had attained the rank of captain and had been decorated for distinguished service.

[These are four Norfolk Islanders with the Coronation contingent. They are Troopers J. R. Buffet, D. Buffet, G. Robinson, and R. Young.]

THE COLENCO DESPATCHES

THE SUPPLIES IN LADYSMITH.

SIR REDVERS BULLER'S BELIEF.

LONDON, July 22.

After the debate in the House of Commons over the heliogram message sent to Sir George White after the battle of Colenso by Sir Redvers Buller, the general wrote to Sir Edward Grey, who has written to the formal amendment upon the matter, that the message sent by Sir George White on November 30, 1899, that he had supplies for 70 days and that he could hold out while they lasted, differed so much from other messages that he had special reasons for not relying upon it. Hence he asked if Sir George White was able to hold his own for a month.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

NOWRA, Tuesday.

Trooper J. W. Miller, who went to South Africa with the 3rd Regiment New South Wales Mounted Rifles was welcomed home to Nowra and entertained at a social last night. Mr. M. F. CONSTITUTIONAL MATCH.

LONDON, July 21.

Mr. J. T. Lake (South Australia) and Private Ballinger (New Zealand) made the "possible" score at the 200 yards in the King's Match.

[Mr. J. T. Lake (South Australia) and Private Ballinger (New Zealand) have done well in the first stage of the King's Match. The conditions of the first stage are seven hits each at 200, 500, and 600 yards, and it will be necessary to know the 200 and the 600 yards in order to determine the result of the King's Match, which is to finish to-day. The 200 yards will be called into requisition every few minutes with the view of keeping a quorum. The match having been thoroughly debated, the motion for adjournment was at 10 p.m. put and negatived by a large majority.

A couple of select committee matters having been settled, the adjournment of the House was moved by the Minister of Works, and after a short discussion on several items the House at 11 p.m. adjourned until the following day.

VICTORIAN PARLIAMENT.

THE REFORM BILL.

MELBOURNE, Tuesday.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day the Prime Minister, Mr. Deakin, moved the second reading of the bill, and the result was that the House, after a short debate, agreed to the motion.

[The Corporation match was fixed on Saturday, when shots each at 20, 500, and 600 yards, the highest possible being 15s points, so that W. Sloane's aggregate of 99 is a very high one, and to obtain the sixteenth place out of probably over a thousand competitors shows that the victor must be fit.

THE "GRAPHIC" MATCH.

LONDON, July 21.

Mr. W. Sloane (Victoria) with 99 points was 16th in the Coronation match, and won £25.

[The conditions of the "Graphic" competition are seven shots at 500 yards, open to all comers using service rifles, the "Graphic" promoters having arranged that all applicants for such a passage should be addressed to Captain E. F. Lumsden, D.A.Q.M.G., or Lieutenant I. Chassing, Victoria Barracks, Apponaugton, who will require to state their qualifications for such a passage, and the date when they intend to start for South Africa.
